BURIAL PERMIT AND BOOKING A FUNERAL

You always need a burial permit. The burial permit is issued by the doctor who conducts the investigation of the cause of death. The doctor gives the permit to the person organising the funeral. The permit can also be given to the funeral home if the family of the deceased wishes.

The funeral home or the family must send the burial permit to the Lutheran parish that administrates the cemetery. See the contact information on the back page. You can mail the burial permit, bring it to the office or scan and e-mail it.

To book a funeral, contact the Lutheran parish that administrates the cemetery.

The parish usually arranges the funeral within three working days. If the deceased died on a weekend or holiday, arranging the funeral may take 5–7 working days.

Contact a cemetery office to book a funeral.

See the contact information of the cemeteries on the back page.

CASKET AND TRANSPORT OF THE DECEASED PERSON

The family of the deceased purchases a casket and transport services from a private funeral home. The family of the deceased purchases a casket and transport services from a private funeral home.

You can find a list of funeral homes on the website of the Finnish Association of Funeral Homes (www.hautautoimistojenliitto.fi).

FUNERAL PRAYER

A funeral prayer can be recited before the interment of the deceased. The prayer can take place either in the cemetery or at a Mosque, hospital or somewhere else. The funeral prayer can be recited by the family of the deceased or their imam.

INTERMENT AND FILLING THE GRAVEEN

A verger welcomes the funeral procession to the cemetery at the agreed time on the funeral day. The verger guides the procession to the burial plot.

The verger brings ropes for lowering the casket into the grave. The grave is dug east to west, parallel to Mecca. The casket is buried so that the deceased is facing Mecca. The casket should be marked to indicate the position of the face of the deceased.

There are shovels on the gravesite for filling the grave. The family of the deceased can fill the grave themselves if they want. If the grave has supporting structures in it, it is filled only halfway or so that the casket is covered in dirt. Cemetery workers will remove the supporting structures and fill the grave after the funeral.

There is also a ladder at the grave for a child's funeral. Usually a family member lowers the deceased child into the grave using the ladder.

FUNERAL COSTS

A funeral is not free. The parish and funeral home charge according to the up-to-date tariffs. The funeral home charges for the casket and transportation of the deceased person.

The parish charges the person organising the funeral for the burial plot and the funeral. The person is responsible for covering the funeral costs.

See up-to-date tariffs on the parishes' websites:

www.vantaanseurakunnat.fi, www.helsinginseurakunnat.fi or www.espoonseurakunnat.fi.

If the property left by the deceased does not cover all funeral costs, your city's social services can help in covering the costs.

HOLDER OF THE RIGHT OF BURIAL

Family members choose among themselves a holder of the right of burial. The chosen person is usually the widow or widower, a child or a parent of the deceased.

The holder of the right of burial takes care of funeral and grave-related issues. The holder of the right of burial

- is a contact person between the family and the parish
- takes care of grave maintenance fees
- takes care of the maintenance of the grave.

RENT OF A BURIAL PLOT

One burial plot is for two caskets. According to the law, the grave plot can be used again after 20 years.

The rent period of a grave plot is 25 years. The rent period can be extended. The cemetery administration charges for rent extensions according to the up-to-date tariffs. The parish sends a letter to the holder of the right of burial when the rent period is close to ending. If the parish does not have the contact person's contact information, they place a note of the ending rent period on the grave.

If the family of the deceased do not wish to extend the rent period, the burial plot is released to the parish and can then be used in the burial of another deceased person.

MAINTENANCE OF THE GRAVE

The grave must be cared for. The family of the deceased can bring flowers and candles to the grave. The holder of the right of burial is always responsible for the maintenance of the grave.
